Landmines are in 75 countries around the world. During a war, landmines injure or kill soldiers, but after the war many remain underground. Farmers or children playing outside are often injured or killed. Landmine explosions have killed or injured hundreds of thousands of people. Most landmine victims live in countries that are now at peace. Landmines also kill farm animals and harm the environment. People live in fear because they don't know exactly where the landmines are. About 13 countries continue to produce landmines, including Iran, North Korea, China, and the United States.
