There are still people on Earth living like ancient people. They don't have telephones, cars, electricity, or any other machines. They don't know about modern technology. They live deep in a rainforest or high up a mountain. In most cases, they want to be left alone. However, there are times when they are forced to interact with modern society. People or companies want their resources or their land. If there's a fight, the tribe loses. Sometimes their only hope is for an NGO like Survival International to defend them. The story below is about the Awa tribe in the Amazon rainforest.
